

McNeal Cemetery

This website has maps of all the graves in the Cemetery in McNeal, Arizona, and an alphabetical list of everyone buried there. Here's a short guide to it all.

-- 1, The maps begin on the next page. The cemetery has two large sections, one to the west of the main entry gate, and one to the east. There are separate maps for each section. Each map has three pages.

In each section, the rows of graves run parallel to Davis Road, which is at the north edge of the cemetery. In the maps, the row nearest to Davis Road is Row 1. The numbers increase as you move south; they presently run up to 48. There's an exception in the west section: a few extra graves right near the fence by Davis Road; this is labeled row zero. There's also an exception in the east section: near the entrance to the cemetery, there's a large area with no graves; but when the graves do begin, they follow the pattern described here.

In each section, each row has about a dozen graves. For the west section, the map labels the grave nearest the center gate as A, and the graves west of that run from B through L. For the east section, the map labels the grave nearest the center as M, and the graves east of that run from N through X. Between every four rows of graves, there is a large path to let you easily walk east or west toward any grave you are looking for.

-- 2, The alphabetical list comes after the maps. The list has 663 names. For every person whose grave is identified, the list has a number and letter, just to the left of that person's name, which show the grave's location. For instance, "1B" is the first row/second grave west of the main entrance; and "3U" would be the third row/ninth grave east of the entrance. Even if a grave is a little out of exact alignment, this number and letter will get you very close.

-- 3, a little more information.

Some people on the list and map are not yet deceased, but have placed a marker where they intend to be buried. Also, some gravesites have missing or illegible markers. If someone is clearly buried at a site, the map says "unmarked" or "illegible," whichever applies.

Here are some of the sources used to prepare this guide:

-- The My Cochise website at <http://mycochise.com/> - click on "genealogy" --"cemeteries" -- "McNeal Cemetery." The most recent death date on this site is 2011. The site contains 607 names.

-- The USGEN website at <http://files.usgwarchives.net/az/cochise/cemeteries/mcneal.txt> - an older list of burials with locations, but no map for those locations. The most recent death date on this site is 2000. The site contains 491 names.

-- The Find-a-Grave website at <http://www.findagrave.com/> - where the public can post names, dates, photos, and other information about the deceased. On the site, click on "search for a cemetery" in the right column. Type "McNeal." Click on the drop-down boxes to fill in "The United States," "Arizona," and "Cochise," and click "search." The McNeal Cemetery site contains 671 entries, although 12 are labeled "unknown." 91% of the entries have photos.

-- My walks through the cemetery, recording grave marker information and location, up through April 9, 2015.
